

Interested in the lives of Native Peoples in our area?

You can help tell their stories ...

There is a rich written history of Native American ways of living, and much stone evidence of their presence along the Agawam / Westfield River, and in the greater Connecticut River watershed area.

We can read colonist and explorer accounts of how the Native peoples lived during various seasons -- how they hunted, gathered, fished and traveled along our rivers, lakes, swamps, flood plains, hills and valleys.

My name is Dianne Snyder. I am working with others to put this story together in a visual way, by using maps to show the range and extent of their seasonal gatherings, and by showing the variety, and use of Native American artifacts from our area.

I am inviting interested people to come together and share their knowledge and artifacts, so we can learn from each other and tell this story together.

If you or someone you know may be interested in developing the story of the Native peoples in our area, or may wish to share what they know of our local Native American land use, please contact me, or pass along the email address and / or phone number shown below.
